

Santa Fe continued from page 1

Santa Fe is one of those places just like the Ozarks, to where I immediately wanted to move. But reason returned and I spent my days, not looking at real estate but buying fun stuff for the store, Dan spent his days lugging stuff for me, Oh, and book buying!

Back in Oklahoma I picked up a table, wool comb and dough bowls. available.

I picked up some really wonderful painted pieces of furniture and primitives. I found a big market called Jack-a-lope that sold the most wonderful pottery pigs and painted mache bowls. I purchased pottery chapalas from the vendors at the Santa Fe Farmers' Market.

nice early vegetable sorting Clay marbles were also

In addition to the Southwest we traveled back north to Minnesota, and the Midwest – across Missouri through Illinois and Indiana. Vintage prints, linens, including floral feed sacks, kitchen gadgets and more. Modern Library Editions, many volumes signed by past Presidents of the United States of America and many nice books on the Civil War are some of the new acquisitions gracing the shelves of the bookstore.

Sow's Ear Antiques and BOOKS at Sow's Ear are well stocked and ready to begin our SIXTH season. Join us seven days per week beginning March 1, 2006, 10:00 am to 6 pm. We hope to see you again, soon.

Deb Byrum Joins Sow's Ear Saff

It's so fun to have friends who are enthusiastic about my business. Deb Byrum first walked into Sow's Ear about 2 years ago right after relocating from central California where she had owned a similarly, eclectic shop. "I'll help you out," she casually remarked one day. Now Deb can be found, on varying days, at Sow's Ear. She knows the inventory and in her words, "People who are interested in antiques are interesting people." Stop in and say, "Hi."

Sow's Ear Motto: We offer quality items in a variety of styles in clean, fun, attractive surroundings at Low Country Prices.